A Warning to Our West Virginia

People.

No impartial man who has carefully watched the course of events in the outh since the overthrow of the rebellion, can deny that many of the Southern people are more defiant in their attitude towards the Government than they were a year ago. They were stunned by the downfall of the Confederacy. They were humbled. They were ready to accept any terms of settlement which the Government might choose to fix. But a great change has come over them. Under any circumstances, some reaction from their extreme quiet would probably have ensued, inas much as that quiet was in part the reby the sudden collapse of the rebellion. As the Southerners recovered from that paralysis, they would of course display more of the hatred which was rankling in their hearts. It may be an open question whether any policy could have been adopted, which would have prevented the manifestations of arrogance on their part. But it is clear that the majority of the southerners who do not yet abandon their theory of the right of secession, do not believe that Congress has the right to impose on them any conditions pre-cedent to the resumption of their old relations to the Union, and are resolved that the Union men in the south shall have no power and but little comfort We are sorry to say this, but we are reluctantly constrained to believe that it is true. Look at the following contrast its condition twelve months ago:

"Then the State was submissive, and reedy for my terms the government might impose. Now, a majority of the people seem to be defiant, and unwilling to return to the Union, save on their own terms. Then the test oath, hard as it is even on the great body of the Union men, was respected as the Inw of the lunion in ow, it is regarded as disreputable to be able to take it. Then the prime authors of all our woes, the secessionists and latter-day war men, were, to all appearances, unconditional Unionists; now they are impudent and arrogant, and the true Unionists are dejected, cowed, proseribed, under the ban socially, pecuniarily and politically. The secessionists of and by themselves were comparatively powerless; Its condition twelve months ago: ly. The secessionists of and by themselves were comparatively powerless; but as soon as Gov. Worth and the latter-day war men joined them, governed as the latter were by vanity and the lust for office, they became the ruling power in the State. What is to be the end of all this we are unable to foresee. We only know that those public men who now control affairs in this State are among the worst enemies the President has; and that they are augmenting the general distress and ruln by keeping the State out of the Union."

He also says that hundreds of loyal where they are subjected to annoyances and persecutions from the rebels.

Are not these melanchely facts a warning to the loyal people of West Virginia? Do they not show us what we may expect if ever the overthrown rebellion should regain its ancient "democratic" ascendancy in our midst? We may rest assured beyond the possibility of mistaka that our experience in that event will not be different from that of the Union men of North Carolina. The spiri of the rebellion is the same everywhere. Our only guaranty of security is in a measure like the constitutional amendment, which preserves the dominancy of the Union element in the State.

The Richmond White security is an anothory and those likely to suffer can take the hint:

"The country at large would evidently be a heavy loser. The extent of its lose would be dependent chiefly upon the decrease of production resulting from the panic. This loss would be eventually felt by all classes in proportion to their consumption, but it would fall directly upon a class who, perhaps, would be least entitled to sympathy. The speculators would far free the produce, coal and other marks, so as to compel consumers to pay exorbitant prices, would be swept and may with the first wave of the panic. Mynufacturers and merchants who would be caught with heavy stocks of goods on hand, would next feel the shock.

To be a member of this Convention, and of the party proposed to be formed, one must have favored obedience to the call made by Elncoln on Virginia in April, 1881, for troops, to be used in making war upon the Southern States, he must have voted against ratifying the ordinance of secession when submitted to the people in May or June of the same-year, or he must be able to explain why he did not so vote; he must have approved the invasion of Virginia by the army under McDowell from Washington, and the army under Buller (the Beast) from Fortress Monroe, and must have lamented, with patrodic anguish, the chastisement which one of them received at Bettel and the other at Bull Run. He must, as in duty bound, bave given all the information, aid and comfort in his power, all through the war, to the armies, agents, emissaries, and spies of the United States. No man who fell short in any of these particulars can pretend to have been "always loyal to the United States. No man who fell short in any of these particulars can pretend to have been "always loyal to the United States Government." Under these circumstances, we are glad this Convention has been called. The public will scan with lively interest the names of those who attend it, since although the war is ended, it can never case to be a matter of solicitude to know who, while it was in progress, were in receitly playing the part of spies and traitors in our midst."

ships arrive at New York laden with refugees from the old world. The average is about 600 per steamer. Germany and Ireland vie with each other in sending their respective contingents, though the preponderance is found in favor of the Teutons, and the move-ment from Germany promises to be on a very large scale, every berth on the lines from Bremen and Hamburg being engaged to the end of the year. Sailing vessels also receive proposals for all the passengers they can carry, chiefly from the North of Germany. It is thought the arrivals for 1866, will reach 300,000, against 196,000 for 1865. Various reasons are assigned for this, as the pros-perity of the United States, and a de sire in Germany to escape the turmoil in Europe. The proportion of Irish and Germans arriving since January

It is noted that nearly all the new ners are thrifty and intelligent, and this is especially true of the Germans. drawn by Ex-Gov. Holden between the condition of North Carolina now and weight with the Union men of West Virginia in tavor of our Constitution-al Amendment. His point is that the plan proposed by the Committee does not guard the Union men in the States from rebel ascendancy and oppress-ion in those States, but that it leaves them entirely in the hands of the rebels, and that consequently we shall soon be almost unable to find a loyal man in the South. The Union men of West Virginia, at the time the Constitutional Amendment was proposed in the State Legislature, saw that this difficulty must arise, and that our municipal legislation could only be preserved in Methodist than anything else—save ar Constitution. They therefore proposed in conformity with the requirements of that instrument the amendment now

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., May 10, 1868. J. L. PARKINSON ESQ.

J. L. Parkinson Esq.

Dear Sir. In reply to your favor of the 4th inst., asking me to give the substance of a conversation had with the Hon. E. A. Rollins, commissioner of the revenue, in your presence, in reference to the appointment of Mr. Leonard, of Parkersburg, as assessor of the first revenue district in stead of your father, I may say, that the commissioner stated distinctly, that the change was made wholly for revenue purposes; that there was no objection whatever to your father, and that he had given enlire satisfaction to the department. To show was no objection whatever to your father, and that he had given enlire satistaction to the department. To show that I am not mistaked, I quote from a note since received from Mr. Rollins in reference to the appointment. He says, "it seemed best for revenue purposes that one of the officers should reside at Parkersburg, (because of the growing importance of that city in connection with petroleum.) So far as the administration of the law is concerned, and the convenience it would afford to the people of your district doing business with revenue officers. It was for this reason that Mr. Leonard's name was substituted for that of Mr. Parkinson. He says in the same connection, "I do not wish that Mr. Parkinson sould consider it any reflection on him, for he had proved himself an officer of experience and ability."

I have every reason to believe that your father gave full satisfaction in all the duties of his office, and that the change was made for the reasons above stated. Very respectfully, yours,

C. D. Hubbard.
